Thank you Ralf!

There was a lot of snow and walking without skis was hard...The route is very nice, we also have grass climbing in polish tatra, so it was not very new to us, but we enjoyed it a lot. i am not sure, how it works here usually, but i think the grass was not perfect, rarely we could find a really solid piece for our tools, they are all quite shallow and were not well frozen to my taste. i think the second and the chimney pitches were the nicest. unfortunately at the top part we stopped looking at topo and we climbed too far from the tree-stand. Only when we reached the ost grat, I realized that we had to climb this big pillar down below... it is a pity as the pillar looked like really interesting climbing. however, the ost grat was also not easy heheh.

In general, i had a feeling that a grade here is harder than on bayerische chamonix, but maybe it is just because we had perfect conditions on geierkopf.
anyways, thank you and i hope to try cold beer next time, looks really cool :)
